

Golden Beauty That Rises With The Sun

For ceremonies honoring the Sun God, the ancient chief of the Chibcha tribe in South America would be covered from head to toe with gold dust. He became, literally, El Dorado "The Gilded One." Certainly, there is no more fitting name for these amazing blooms from Spring Hill.

of two South African species and represent a superior hybrid variety. They are quite unlike anything that came before—a "new world" of floral beauty. Each was specially bred for vigorous bloom, bushy form and consistent height. Masses of flowers cover the rounded, 8-10" tall plants all summer long! Lush Foliage Ground Cover

The lobed, spoon-shaped leaves come in two types. The first is a deep, cool green. The second has a silvery sheen (we call it "Frosty"). You'll enjoy the exciting contrast they create when planted side by side. Both offer the perfect foil for the hot-hued blossoms.

Like their namesake, our gazanias are true sun worshippers. At night, they close up their delicate petals, protecting their gilded treasure until the warm rays of dawn coax them out again. Each day, they awaken to show off a perfectly round corona of petals; dark colored at the base and brilliantly bright at the tips with sunny shades of yellow, orange, bronze, rose and white. They will bring exciting new radiance to areas of the garden where only boring, dull greens were seen before!
